- i. Mr. Badger explained that overall, there has been a strong market start this year in the U.S. and globally. Locally, however, recent data has shown that New Orleans homeowners are the highest among other major U.S. cities where homeowners are at risk for foreclosure.
 - ii. The recently announced $1.9 trillion emergency relief plan, will hopefully help steer our national economy out of the pandemic and mitigate the forthcoming crisis around the U.S., especially here in New Orleans. U.S. employment fell by 140,000 in December as virus cases surged. Leisure and hospitality businesses were hit hard.
 - iii. This was the first net decline in payrolls since last spring's mass layoffs and followed five straight months in which hiring had slowed. The unemployment rate was unchanged at 6.7 percent.
 - iv. The municipal bond market is starting the year strong with good demand, light supply of new issues, and the expectations of fiscal relief for state and governments. Mortgage rates have been increasing after setting a dozen record lows last year. Mortgage refinancing spiked 20% last week compared to the previous week. Most recent jobs data locally show New Orleans had an 9.8% unemployment rate in November. That's down from 11% in the prior month, but up from 4.6% in November 2019.
